

Honey Doves

By Naomi Cristina Narváez Rivera

Our eyes meet under the warm summer sky.
The gentle night breeze blowing my hair,
Sweet and tuneful melodies ringing through the night.
Constellations witnessing our hearts.

Hands intertwined with promises,
Lips interlocked with passion,
Butterflies and fireflies dancing in my belly.
Captured in each other's eyes.

Gazes connected from far away.
Walls torn inside of our hearts,
Two lovers discovering each other.
Hearts falling in love.

Souls finding their true selves together.
Feelings taken out to the light,
Synchronized heartbeats,
Minds linked and full of love.

Our divine love is unbreakable.
Starry sights and dreamy nights wait for us,
Your smile is my dream come true.
Our eyes twinkle and shine when they find each other.

I wouldn't want anyone else but you to complete my soul.

My soul wants to be engulfed in your loving arms.

Eyelashes fluttering slowly,

Lips tracing their road together.

Harmless hands gripping my waist,

My arms clutching your neck softly.

Faces getting closer and admiring each other,

Dreamy gazes getting lost in each other's hearts.

Rosy cheeks and shy smiles.

Tenderness and affection in each of our touches,

Encounters full of flowers and colors.

Our hearts beating, lovingly for each other.

Fingers interlocked with love.

Coffee brown eyes gazing in each other's reflection,

Two lost pairs of lips finding their home.

Our connection is indestructible.
