

So Simple By Devin O'Brian

Everything seemed so simple
Like a whisper in the silence.

The symbolic crashing of a cymbal

To ease us to the end.

Now I never imagined the end
So bittersweet
Take the courage to mend
The war in our heads

We are like violence and peace.

The opposition, too strong.

The lonesomeness will not cease

If we stay as one.

We are like medusa and Athena, the punishment does not fit the crime but the universe never cared much for them and we are stuck doing our time watching the world move while we remain still

I was hurt so I set you on fire

I didn't want to suffer alone causing you pain was never my desire but hurt is a weakness i didn't want to face alone.

We both had our flaws
We hurt each other to feel better about our own sorrow
We didn't take a moment to pause
Didn't allow the openness we needed.

We are like cinderella and the clock has struck midnight.

Though we will not get our happy ending.

Maybe we'll meet again where there's still some light.

Light in our love and light in our life

I suppose this is goodbye
I hate to see it end though you're right, it's definitely time
We can let the death of us finally lie
I wish you well, goodbye.
