Who am I?
You can see me and think that I am a white young lady because I am pale.
In the summer my skin gets darker and I get tanner.
I grew up eating arroz con pollo
My family's favorite dish
When I was very little my family would tell me how much they love me
They say te quiero mucho
When they joke around and laugh they say estúpido.
When we dance and have fun we say wepa
Who am I?
I am boricua.

Emotions I can't show

My family taught me at times to try and open up and express my feelings.
I felt like my emotions weren't as deep when I was younger so anything that I was sad or mad about was not really a big deal.
They would tell me everything was going to be fine.
I'm older now and feel a lot more emotions than I used to.
I keep my feelings bottled in because I'd rather save my feelings for myself instead of hearing everythings going to be okay.
I don't get sad or mad about toys anymore or not having my way.
My feelings are deeper than just being able to say everything will be ok.
